THERE GOES THE ELECTION!

It pains me to no end to witness the Democratic Presidential candidates form a circular firing squad in the debates, almost unanimously pushing policies that will guarantee four more years of Trump. They do so out of a sense of noble idealism, but what good are those intentions if they kill your chance of gaining power to enact progressive policies?

In the first debate, when asked whose healthcare plan would cover undocumented immigrants, every candidate on the stage raised their hand. The next day the New York Post ran a front-page photo of the lockstep hand-raisers with the headline "Who wants to lose the election?" The Post is a Murdoch paper, but the headline nailed it. Among the working-class voters who defected from Obama to Trump and in fact among the majority of Americans, this radical idea of "open borders," meaning no borders at all and no enforcement of immigration policy, is insanity. No other nation on Earth does this, even progressive countries like Canada and Norway.

Montana governor Steve Bullock justly criticized this stance: "We got a hundred thousand people showing up at the border right now. If we decriminalize entry, if we give healthcare to everyone, we'll have multiples of that. Don't take my word—that was President Obama's homeland security secretary that said that." Indeed, Jeh Johnson did say, "That is unworkable, unwise and does not have the support of a majority of American people or the Congress…"

We're $22 trillion in debt, with thousands of American citizens still uninsured or underinsured, homeless populations crowding our major cities, robots primed to take over many unskilled and skilled jobs in the near future, our border facilities and immigration courts totally swamped—and we're inviting the world's 700 million people living in extreme poverty to surge across our "obsolete" borders to file an asylum claim and get free healthcare? What pie-in-the-sky yokels dreamed this up?

The second bullet in the foot was reparations for slavery, advocated by Julián Castro, Cory Booker and Marianne Williamson. I believe in equality before the law, nondiscrimination based on race and gender and recognize that the racism and sexism still prevalent in our society need to be fought constantly, but I don't believe in paying out huge sums for what our distant ancestors did. If it were 1900 instead of 2019, then I could support reparations to those directly affected. But to make reparations for what happened over a century ago is not going to fly with the majority of Americans. We have to focus on making the future more just and equitable, not the past. Can we afford to implement universal healthcare, free college tuition and pay billions in reparations? Not a chance.

After the second debate the Trump campaign ran its first reelection ad, featuring these utopian ideas. I hate to say it, but it was devastatingly effective, painting the Democrats as totally out of touch with reality. This is the curse of identity politics run amok, with the "politically correct" crowd denouncing anyone who doesn't get behind these radical notions as "racist."

Memo to Democratic candidates: You're not running for president of a liberal arts college, but of the whole United States. Whoever the final candidate is must ditch these albatrosses or hand the election to Trump.

SNOOPY RETAIL GIANT

AMAZON IS MAKING BILLIONS SELLING MERCHANDISE, BUT ONE OF ITS PRIME CASH COWS IS GATHERING PERSONAL INFO FOR BIG BROTHER.

From Amazon's inception as an alternative to brick-and-mortar bookstores, and despite the carnage it visited upon those venerable cultural gathering places—replacing friendly and knowledgeable clerks with a two-day package delivery system—the company has projected a benign image of good intention. But the dirty secret is that the low prices offered by Amazon, while effective in bankrupting a dizzying array of rival retailers, haven't been the tech company's most promising source of profit.

In fact, Amazon wasn't content to merely slash prices as it strove to become an e-commerce giant. The company saw fit to collect the most intimate details about its customers' tastes, habits and preferences.

Stored on cloud computing's most extensive network of remote servers, this invaluable data is now the prime source of Amazon's overall profits. Personal information is the foundation of the company's vast marketing of its own wares, from the movies you watch to the Alexa device perched near your bed. Amazon is constantly capturing your life experiences and converting that information into future sales.

However, it is not the money earned on those sales, but rather the information gleaned from customers that has enabled Amazon to garner investor capital and high stock valuations. And it's those higher valuations that provide the basis for anticipated higher profit margins, which have only started to grow substantially in the past three years.

Surprisingly, Amazon's vast international operation lost $2.2 billion in 2018. The poor profit picture abroad may become even bleaker now that the European Union has launched an antitrust investigation, a regulatory threat to the online retailer's escalating market power. As The Wall Street Journal reported, the probe will "examine whether Amazon is abusing its dual role as a seller of its own products and a marketplace operator" for other merchants selling goods on its website.

Not surprisingly, Amazon had its best year ever domestically in 2018, with a reported profit of $10.1 billion. But what really stands out is that Amazon Web Services (AWS), which handles the company's cloud-computing system, delivered more than half of Amazon's 2018 domestic profit.

Your data is Amazon's profit source, to be mined not only for its own retail business but also for third parties wishing to take advantage of Amazon's vast information-gathering resources. This, of course, raises privacy concerns, but if it remains a matter of a personal commercial activity, the sacrifice of privacy can be thought of as a choice that consumers make for shopping convenience. Doing so might be an unwise decision, as the consumer is unwittingly surrendering the protection of private data offered by the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Such an option is not in the cards for a governmental agency, which must obtain a specific court order to use any personal information it collects. And here is the rub for Amazon's profit model: It is increasingly dependent on AWS's contract work with the federal government.

Already Amazon is the major creator and operator of cloud storage and computer services for this country's leading national security and intelligence agencies. The company secured its dominance in the infancy of cloud computing in 2013 with a $600-million, ten-year contract with the CIA. That deal paved the way for Amazon to become the key provider of cloud services for federal agencies.

Amazon seems likely to seal its dominance over the storage of official government data thanks to a $10-billion bid for a Defense Department contract to build the Joint Enterprise Defense Infrastructure (JEDI) war cloud, which would manage all future military engagements. The Pentagon stacked the deck in Amazon's favor by specifying it only wanted one company to run JEDI, and Amazon—as the U.S. government's cloud leader—fit the bill.

That deal would leave Amazon as the major keeper of all data collected on Americans by private and public organizations—the ultimate Orwellian Big Brother surveillance machine. This is just the sort of frightening prospect that The Washington Post might have been expected to expose, given its reputation for vigorously investigating the government's abuse of power dating back to President Richard Nixon and the Watergate scandal.

But don't count on it. Amazon's founder and CEO, Jeff Bezos, bought up that once-respected newspaper with some loose change he found in his personal holdings.

HIGH COURT GUTS FIRST AMENDMENT

THE SUPREME COURT'S RULING ON PARTISAN GERRYMANDERING IS A DIRECT ASSAULT ON VOTERS' FREE SPEECH.

For more than 45 years HUSTLER has stood unapologetically for First Amendment rights, as underscored by the U.S. Supreme Court's landmark 1988 ruling in HUSTLER Magazine, Inc. v. Falwell. So it must not go unnoticed here that the Court's stolen Republican majority has now gutted a central First Amendment right for millions of Americans.

Reflecting the Court's partisan right/left divide, a recent 5-to-4 decision overturns multiple lower federal courts in North Carolina, Ohio, Virginia, Michigan, Wisconsin, Florida and Maryland to grant unfettered permission to partisan lawmakers in every state to weaken the power of voters who do not share their political views. The ruling is likely to favor Republicans over Democrats for the next decade or longer.

Writing for the majority, Chief Justice John G. Roberts Jr. declared that federal courts may take no action to prevent state legislatures from drawing extremely partisan district lines to bastardize representative democracy. Lawmakers may pack as many Democrats as possible into as few districts as they can, while cracking the rest across districts that Dems can likely never win.

The ruling struck down two cases, but reverses many others. Rucho v. Common Cause involved a federal court order for North Carolina to redraw its U.S. House maps before the 2020 election because Republicans who controlled the state after the 2010 census drew unfair districts for partisan advantage during the Constitutionally mandated reapportionment. Lamone v. Benisek challenged the redrawing of a Maryland U.S. House district that Democrats mapped to keep Republicans from winning there.

After the 2010 census, states in which the GOP controlled both legislative chambers and the governorship used sophisticated software to rig state legislative and U.S. House maps, particularly in swing states. That made it virtually impossible to lose their majorities no matter how many votes Democrats received.

For example, in North Carolina, which often votes nearly 50/50 for U.S. House members, the map drawn by GOPers assured that Dems could win just three of the state's 13 U.S. House seats over the past decade. In Wisconsin, where Democrats won a 54% majority of votes for the state assembly in 2012 (the first election after redistricting), they were awarded just 36 of 99 seats, robbing progressives of their voice—their votes—in the Badger State legislature.

Despite the obvious, antidemocratic abuse of power that every lower federal court saw clear as day, Roberts concluded that partisan gerrymandering is "beyond the reach of the federal courts," leaving the same rigged state bodies that created the problem to fix it. But, of course, why would they?

"Partisan gerrymandering is uniquely evil," Slate's legal reporter Mark Joseph Stern told me after the decision was handed down. "It attacks the foundations of democracy. It entrenches a certain political party's power almost indefinitely and creates a map that will hold even if the state votes against that party. So as soon as legislatures have gone in and drawn a gerrymander that they like and entrenched their own power, they're in there for good. It's no longer a representative democracy, and it's not responding to the people's will."

Stern—who described the ruling as "the nightmare scenario" for voting rights—added, "You really have to rely on the courts to step in and fix it." While state courts may still act, the many lower federal courts that deemed this political gamesmanship to be a treacherous violation of the Constitution may no longer even hear such cases.

It is often said that the right to vote is protective of all other rights. But if the power of the vote is strangled by partisan chicanery, all other rights fall with it. Look at many GOP-controlled states. In recent years they have adopted laws—on abortion, guns, taxes and more—that are wildly contrary to the majority will of its citizens.

"There is no more fundamental free speech right in this country, under the Constitution, than the ability to associate with a political party, express your support for that party and to go to the polls and vote for a candidate of that party," Stern railed. "That, in fact, is what the First Amendment was designed to protect. That is at the heart of freedom of expression."

Since Roberts was appointed Chief Justice in 2005, the Court has found a "right" to unlimited corporate spending on elections in the Citizens United case, gutted the landmark Voting Rights Act's central protections for minority voters and now refused to strike down political gerrymandering. Yes, the Roberts Court has unleashed an all-out assault on democracy itself.

Stern fumed, "This is a court that says the First Amendment applies with more force to billionaire donors writing big checks than it does to everyday citizens. It simply cannot be the case that there are stronger First Amendment protections for plutocrats funneling money into campaigns to buy favor with candidates than there are for you and me and everyone who just wants to make their voice heard in government."

In her blistering dissent on behalf of the Court's minority, Justice Elena Kagan noted that partisan gerrymanders "debased and dishonored our democracy, turning upside-down the core American idea that all governmental power derives from the people.… The practices challenged in these cases imperil our system of government. Part of the Court's role in that system is to defend its foundations. None is more important than free and fair elections."

In November 2020, before another national census is conducted and the next redistricting process begins, please remember this: Your vote for state legislators may well determine your rights to free speech and much more for the ensuing decade and beyond. Unlike the Supreme Court, don't abandon your duty. H

LINDSEY GRAHAM

South Carolina has long been the nation's most militant state; more American Revolution battles were fought here than anywhere else, and South Carolina was the first to secede from the Union in the Civil War, after the Rebels fired on Fort Sumter in Charleston, triggering the greatest bloodbath in our history. Ever since, South Carolina has produced a predictable flock of war hawks, the latest being three-term incumbent Senator Lindsey Graham.

First elected in 2002, Graham was gung ho for George W. Bush's invasion of Iraq, claiming that Saddam Hussein was "a threat to our way of life" and that he was "flat-out lying" about having no weapons of mass destruction. Anyone not in a coma for the last 15 years knows what a giant clusterfuck that war has turned out to be, costing thousands of American lives, hundreds of thousands of Iraqi lives and trillions of dollars. But has Graham learned anything from this fiasco?

In 2015 he hopped into the Republican clown car to run for President, touting his foreign policy experience as his prime qualification, but asked if the Iraq War was a mistake, he answered, "No, I don't think so," before blaming Obama for the ongoing mess. About the other bloody quagmires in the Middle East we've created, he blurted these zingers: "We need as many people on the ground as the Libyan people will welcome to shape the next few months." ISIS "will open the gates of hell to spill out on the world." "Chemical weapons in Syria today means nuclear weapons in the U.S. tomorrow." Because of Iran's alleged nuclear weapons program, "We're walking down the road to Armageddon," and "If they're itching for a fight, they're going to get one."

His solution to every foreign policy problem is to use violence as a first resort, not the last: Bomb the holy shit out of them. Then send more troops in harm's way. He even wants to invade Venezuela! As the authoritative ForeignPolicy.com site states, "Sometimes he's completely out of his mind. In a town filled with threat-mongers, fear merchants and hand-wringers, there is no one mongering more threats, selling more fear and wringing more hands than Senator Graham." Maybe it's because, like so many other belligerent neocon asswipes (John Bolton, Max Boot, etc.), he never served in combat, never saw the blood and guts firsthand, and has to compensate by playing macho man. His biography website lists him as a "veteran" of Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm, even though he spent his entire career in the Air Force behind a desk as a military lawyer. Forget leaving the U.S.; he never even left South Carolina while in uniform. Since the sky is always falling according to Graham, we'll call him Chicken Little Hawk.

While Graham has been a consistent warmonger, his other positions have been more flexible—weather vane flexible. Nowhere is this more apparent than his attitude toward the orange orangutan currently occupying the White House. While Lindsey was vying for that office himself, he described Trump as: "a race-baiting, xenophobic bigot"; "a wrecking ball"; "a politician whose ideas are gibberish"; "a death blow to the GOP's relationship with women"; "a politician who is incapable of representing a mattress company"; "a Twitter user whose tweets are sometimes beneath the office of the Presidency"; and "the world's biggest jackass." So he's actually capable of a pretty good grip on reality—when he chooses to apply it. Unfortunately, Trump has completely discombobulated him.

Now Graham has become one of Trump's best golfing buddies, describing the Donald as "a President doing a great job," "the best hope in decades for peace," "a thoughtful person" and "a potential recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize." He confesses that "I have never been called this much by a President in my life. It's weird, and it's flattering, and it creates some opportunity." We think flattery—as addictive as meth for most politicians—is the main grease lubricating Lindsey's wrenching flip-flop, but he's also calculating that he needs to ride the idiot wave and grab on to Trump's coattails for possible reelection. To do that, he has to abandon all his moderate principles and act like a raving racist Trumpite.

Yes, before Trump, Graham had a reputation as a moderate Republican, willing to cross the aisle and work cooperatively with Democrats. Under the Obama Administration, he backed Democratic legislation to provide citizenship for undocumented immigrants, voted for two female Justices to the Supreme Court (Sonia Sotomayor and Elena Kagan) and even supported policies to address climate change. But that was yesterday.

Today Graham is fully behind the "race-baiting, xenophobic" bigotry of Donald Trump, made forever unambiguous when Trump suggested that four freshman Democratic representatives, all women of color, should "go back and help fix the totally broken and crime infested places from which they came." That's the oldest racist trope in the whole sordid history of America—like "send all blacks back to Africa and Latinos to Mexico." Never mind that three of those congresswomen were actually born in the U.S. (Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, Rashida Tlaib and Ayanna Pressley) and the fourth (Ilhan Omar) immigrated from Somalia when she was only ten and became a naturalized citizen. If their American hometowns are "totally broken and crime infested," it's mainly the fault of a President who gave billions in tax cuts to the bloated one-percent and stoked the flames of racial animosity nationwide.

Later, at a Trump rally, the MAGA crowd chanted about Ilhan Omar, "Send her back!" While most Republicans either issued tepid condemnations or just fell into an embarrassed silence over this turd bomb, Graham got his war hawk feathers all ruffled and pinched out this steaming log to top off the pile: "We all know that AOC [Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez] and this crowd are a bunch of Communists. They hate Israel. They hate our own country.... They accuse people who support Israel of 'doing it for the Benjamins.' They're anti-Semitic. They're anti-America."

First, "the Squad," as they're known, are not Communists: They don't advocate the state owning all or even some of the means of production—the core principle of communism. Study it, Lindsey. Second, they don't "hate America" or "hate Israel" simply because they draw attention to some of the bad policies and failings of those countries. Their motivation is not "hate," but a passion for the progress of justice and fairness for all Americans and all inhabitants of the Middle East.

And they are not "anti-Semitic" for pointing out that the U.S. continues to subsidize the illegal military occupation and settlement of Palestinian territory, in violation of international law and even against our own official policy, largely due to the power of AIPAC and other well-heeled Zionist lobbies. Dare point out any of Israel's increasingly brutal apartheid policies under Netanyahu, and rich fanatics like Sheldon Adelson and pals will dump millions of dollars into your opponent's campaign chest. Ask Cynthia McKinney how that works. Yes, the Benjamins do explain America never ever enforcing its own foreign policy, despite a ton of leverage that is never ever applied. But this kind of jingoistic, flag-waving bullshit is manna to Trump's base, and it's Graham's specialty—hyping dangerous foreign enemies everywhere, even in our own Congress.

In 2017 Graham said about Trump, "What concerns me about the American press is this endless, endless attempt to label the guy some kind of kook not fit to be President." Where did they get that crazy idea? Maybe from Graham himself, who said this in 2016: "I think he's a kook. I think he's crazy. I think he's unfit for office." You got it all right the first time, Lindsey: Your party's leader is indisputably the "world's biggest jackass." And for lending your support to this embarrassing kook, you have become the world's biggest Asshole. H

SWINGER DOWN!

We all like to point fingers, but sex isn't a one-size-fits-all type of thing. What's normal in Japan may seem weird to us and vice versa. But can we all just pause and mutually acknowledge that British people are into some next-level kink? Not so much extreme as the national obsession with sex and the volume of people who get freaky on the regular. Seriously, respect.

And this goes far beyond the busy streets of London—about 100 miles or so northeast to be specific, where the tiny hamlet of Upper Welland hosts an annual free-for-all called Swingfields, billed as the biggest sex festival in all of Europe, with events like jelly wrestling and a lewd tug-of-war.

Participants—700 in 2019—shell out up to £415 ($518 USD) for a three-day pass, while those who aren't into roughing it can pay extra for glamping options, including a 12-person party tent equipped with beds. Once on site, everyone sports color-coded bracelets that indicate their swinger status, e.g., "hot wife" (married woman who sleeps with other men), "bull" (well-endowed male, single or married, looking for sex) and of course the fabled "unicorn" (hot bi female who does couples, more myth than reality).

But you know what they say about too much of a good thing: It's not a good thing. That's what one 52-year-old swinger learned the hard way in July, when she suffered a heart attack mid-mingle. She was treated right away by medics on site, then transported by air ambulance to a hospital and fitted with a stent. Remember, pace yourself!

Organizers insist that Swingfields is not the lurid key-swap stereotype that dogs the swinger community. "It is not what people think it is. It's about socializing. It's about like-minded people getting together. If you don't have chemistry, or a connection, nothing is going to happen."

Locals aren't thrilled, with one pensioner going so far as to body-shame the mostly 40-plus thrill seekers: "It's unappealing. They are not young people. They are middle-aged with big tummies. It is slightly dreadful. And there is something a bit frightening about it...I don't like the secrecy." What a wet blanket. Live and let live, we say. Love and let love. But please, be careful!

"Sex without love is a meaningless experience, but as far as meaningless experiences go, it's pretty good." —WOODY ALLEN, DIRECTOR

LIVIN' LA VIDA IN VITRO

Science fiction, you win again. As the dark future nightmares of literature and film steadily manifest into reality, it should come as no surprise that another prophecy may come to be sooner than we think: the end of fucking to make babies. Welcome to sexual dystopia.

Stanford University's Henry T. Greely is sounding the death knell in his new book, an uplifting romp called the The End of Sex and the Future of Human Reproduction—add it to your beach reading list. In it the renowned law professor, who specializes in the biosciences, predicts that technology will make sex for reproduction obsolete—and the proof is in the pudding (so to speak).

For example, were you aware that since the birth of the first so-called test tube baby 41 years ago, more than 8 million people have been born via in vitro fertilization? This is the process by which an egg is combined with sperm outside the body (in vitro). An egg is removed from the woman's ovaries and fertilized with sperm in a laboratory. Implant the egg into a fertile uterus, bake for nine months, and voila—your brand-new baby, without all that messy cramped sex in the back of your Toyota Corolla.

In an interview with the BBC, Greely predicts that in "20 to 40 years, most people all over the world with good health coverage will choose to conceive in a lab." The why remains controversial, in that preimplantation genetic diagnosis (PGD) allows parents to screen out "problematic" embryos—and once the process becomes more accessible/affordable, more and more people will choose to have children this way. Chilling? Depends where you fall on the nihilism spectrum.

And speaking of film, a quick nod to the classics that expertly hinted at the (d)evolution of human reproduction: Gattaca (eugenics, e.g., PGD), Children of Men (holy shit, no one can have babies), The Matrix (we're all just meat batteries grown in a field) and even Woody Allen's Sleeper (sex is inefficient; touch this orb). Enjoy the apocalypse!

THE FIRST LADY OF LUMBER

In what can only be described as pure nightmare fuel, well-meaning albeit confused Slovenians commemorated homeland hero and Lizard Queen/First Lady Melania Trump with a statue that makes Celoron's serial killer Lucille Ball look positively angelic by comparison.

What Reuters politely describes as "rustic" is in actuality a monument to pagan terror—or so says this very unsettled writer. Its provenance is equally baffling, so strap in because this gets very random very quickly.

The piece was commissioned by Berlin-based American artist Brad Downey, whose recent show in the capital city of Ljubljana explores Melania's Slovenian roots. Her "likeness" was carved with a chainsaw by local folk artist Ales Zupevc and is said to be a cheeky companion piece to the aforementioned exhibit.

The decidedly unlifelike figure was cut from the trunk of a living linden tree, and no one is quite sure what to make of it. And while one would be hard-pressed to see any physical resemblance, we can all take solace in the obvious analogy that Melania is as wooden as they come. Or maybe that's just her resting clone face (prove me wrong, FBI).

Adding insult to injury is the attempt to dress this vaguely humanoid forest monster. Wrapped in the pale blue wraparound coat that Melania wore at No. 45's inauguration, the effect is not unlike when children attempt to dress a snowman: cute at first, but ultimately disturbing.

As coincidence would have it, the sculptor was born the same month as Melania and in the same hospital no less. He now mostly works as a pipe-layer (giggle), and shares his thoughts on the First Lady in a short film for Downey's project. "She owns half of America while I have nothing." Now, that's art.

SHE'S NOT HEAVY

Welcome to the only sporting event that really matters—not even the Super Bowl comes close to capturing the majesty, grandeur and glory of the North American Wife Carrying Championship. Gentlemen, lift your spouses, and take your marks!

The 20th edition of this illustrious competition kicks off October 12, and it's every bit as ludicrous and epic as it sounds. The tradition of wife carrying is steeped in history and Norse mythology, dating back to 19th century Finnish legend Ronkainen the Robber, who maintained the highest of standards for men he let into his nefarious band of scoundrels. To prove their mettle, contenders would have to negotiate a difficult obstacle course carrying a heavy sack. In the absence of a sack, a woman from a neighboring village was considered a viable substitute.

The first modern incarnation of this now friendly and consensual event was held in Finland in 1991, with foreign participants finally being admitted in 1995. Qualifying events are also held in Australia, Sweden and Estonia, which baffles the mind because it means that there are so many people wanting to compete that it requires a process to narrow down the field.

2018 North American event champs Jesse Wall and Christine Arsenault (combined age of 80-plus years, combined weight of 350-plus pounds) are the team to beat this year, but they've got their work cut out for them. How it works: The course is 278 yards (as per international standards), with two dry obstacles and one water obstacle. No weight limits on your wife, and the winner is determined by a head-to-head race and not overall time. The terrain is wildly uneven, and racers must negotiate log hurdles, sand traps and the soul-reckoning widow-maker water hazard.

How you carry your wife is up to you, though seasoned pros will tell you to stick with the tried-and-true "Estonian carry," demonstrated in the accompanying pic. Is it safe? Look, do you want to win or not?

The champions take home the wife's weight in Goose Island Oktoberfest beer, five times her weight in cash (what?!), and a berth into the world championship, which takes place in Finland the following summer. Team HUSTLER, let's do this!

IF IT WALKS LIKE A DUCK...

In July America's Racist-in-Chief took aim at "The Squad": Ilhan Omar of Minnesota, Rashida Tlaib of Michigan, Ayanna Pressley of Massachusetts and Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez of New York, a quartet of progressive Democrats in Congress who do not back down or abide by politics as usual. Being nonwhite and female, it wasn't long before the audacity of their mere existence made them targets for Trump's hateful trolling. You may remember this clusterfuck from July:

"So interesting to see 'Progressive' Democrat Congresswomen, who originally came from countries whose governments are a complete and total catastrophe, the worst, most corrupt and inept anywhere in the world (if they even have a functioning government at all), now loudly...

"...and viciously telling the people of the United States, the greatest and most powerful Nation on earth, how our government is to be run. Why don't they go back and help fix the totally broken and crime infested places from which they came."

Then, the Orwellian coup de grâce: Defending his previous tweets, he insisted, "I don't have a racist bone in my body!" This overt contradiction is a hard pill to swallow, which is why we are now obliged to offer a refresher course on what a hate-filled piece of shit this guy really is. The following are actual quotes, unadulterated. Weep for humanity.

"Why are we having all these people from shithole countries come here? We should have more people from places like Norway."

"Excuse me, they didn't put themselves down as neo-Nazis, and there were some very bad people in that group. But you also had some people that were very fine people on both sides."

"When Mexico sends its people, they're not sending the best. They're sending people that have lots of problems, and they're bringing those problems. They're bringing drugs; they're bringing crime. They're rapists."

"Donald J. Trump is calling for a complete and total shutdown of Muslims entering the United States until our country's representatives can figure out what the hell is going on."

"Our great African-American President hasn't exactly had a positive impact on the thugs who are so happily and openly destroying Baltimore."

"I have a great relationship with the blacks. I've always had a great relationship with the blacks."

I grew up in Ukraine—I was a nice girl, quiet and obedient, and I guess I'm still like that now. I don't usually talk much. I prefer to express myself through my body and my sexuality. I'm pretty new to the adult industry, but I've been having a great time. I enjoy traveling, meeting people and, of course, the sex.

"I like to be dominated in bed, onscreen and in real life. I want my man to fuck me from behind. Then, just when I think I'm about to orgasm, I want his cock in my ass. He doesn't need to play gentle. He knows I like it rough. By the end of the night, I want all my holes filled."

MISTRESS, MAY I?

A STEP-BY-STEP GUIDE TO YOUR FIRST DUNGEON VISIT

You're curious. You've seen Fifty Shades of Grey, or perhaps you're simply bored with your vanilla sex life. Whatever your reason, you've decided that visiting a dominatrix will allow your inner kink to flourish or fulfill a fantasy. Of course, you're nervous to enter this alternative world and let a domme take control and crack the whip. But deep down something says you'll enjoy the experience.

To help you with your first visit, we've put together a guide for those who want to sample tough love. We spoke with world-renowned rigger and AVN Hall of Fame director/dominatrix Julie Simone (Mistress Simone) and award-winning indie adult star and self-made entrepreneur Larkin Love (Mistress Larkin). Both have years of experience and are respected as two of the best dommes out there.

NO MATTER WHAT THEIR STANDING IN LIFE, SHE SAYS, "THEY ALL CHECK IT AT THE DOOR WHEN IT'S TIME TO PLAY. MY HOUSE, MY RULES."

WHAT TYPE OF MEN GO TO A DOMINATRIX

Often powerful men who enjoy control in their daily lives become the clients of dominatrices. Our two experts tells us that high-power executives and higher-ups in the military account for the majority of the men who visit them, but clients come from all walks of life. Mistress Simone explains that men in power can find it difficult to completely let go, so she "reminds them that they came to me because they wanted a certain type of experience. They trust me and my expertise to give them what they want and so desperately need. Sometimes I'll have them repeat over and over again 'I'm not in control anymore' until they can relax and let their journey into submission begin."

Mistress Larkin's clientele includes two A-list Hollywood directors, a Fortune 500 CEO, a handful of congressmen, doctors, lawyers and executives. Roughly one-third of her clients are average guys who are "just kinky and love the kind of experience" she provides. But no matter what their standing in life, she says, "They all check it at the door when it's time to play. My house, my rules."

WHAT ARE YOU LOOKING FOR?

You have decided to visit a dominatrix. What now? First, be aware of your likes, your proclivities. Next, ask yourself if you're a kinkster, fetishist, submissive, masochist or more than one of the above. Mistress Simone breaks down those labels for us. "A kinkster wants to try something kinky and fun and generally isn't into pain or humiliation. Fetishists are focused on a particular item or activity, like stockings, boot worship or me smoking for them. They're not usually submissive, but can be. Submissives want to be told what to do within set parameters, which includes a wide range of activities. The release a submissive is seeking is often mental, though it can be physical too. Masochists want to feel pain and often seek to test or push their limits. This could include spanking, paddling and single-tail whipping. They won't generally have a safe word. There is some crossover. Many masochists can also be submissive; kinksters and fetishists are very similar; and some find submission through enacting their fetishes."

HOW TO FIND A DOMINATRIX

With SESTA/FOSTA laws in effect, it's becoming harder to find a domme. Backpage has shut down, Craigslist removed their personals section, and Eros and the Erotic Review are both restricting ads. Some dominatrices are turning to sites like Switter and Harlothub. Mistress Simone boasts a steady client base, and you can use the website JuliesBitchBoys.com to set up appointments. Potential clients should click on "Book a Session." The mistress also relies heavily on social media and believes it's a "really useful tool to see what a domme is into and what her personality is like." You'll find "her photos and interests, along with links to buy her clips to see what she's like in a scene."

Mistress Larkin has never used Eros and Backpage to acquire new clients. She relies on platforms like Twitter, Reddit and Facebook and believes most dommes "worth their salt will have Twitter, a personal website and a clip store to look through before you contact her." She insists that with the power of social media, "A clever domme can get plenty of business without running ads on sites." She scores many clients from her store on Clips4Sale, as well as her official site LarkinLove.com.

HOW TO CHOOSE A MISTRESS

Picking the perfect mistress can be the hardest part of the process. There are many dommes out there. Always go for the professionals. They have extensive training, understand how important safety is, wear killer couture and have strict health standards for their spaces and dungeons.

Avoid women who post prostitution acts or porn photos to their ads or sites. These women are escorts pretending to be dominatrices. Look for listings like "body rub," "massage," "full-service," "everything you want," and "happy ending" mixed in with typical kinky acts a domme would provide, like bondage and flogging. You could be in for a horrible session or even put your health at risk, since they're not trained properly. If you're unsure if someone is really a pro domme, look for client reviews on sites like Eros or Fetlife.

Make a note of things you're interested in and see if the domme you're considering specializes in those types of services. Mistress Simone has a list of interests on her site. You can determine if they match yours; plus you can check out role-play scenarios. Mistress Larkin specializes in taboo role-play, psychological domination, humiliation and more. If you are unsure of a domme's specialties, just ask.

HOW MUCH DOES A SESSION COST?

The average price of a session varies by location and will be higher in metropolitan areas. If your domme is well known, expect to pay more. For a pro domme, the average price falls somewhere between $250 to $300 an hour. If you're going out in public to take a domme for a meal or shopping, be prepared to pay for her food, beverages, transportation, Uber rides and gifts. Messy sessions that involve food play, sploshing, wax, baby oil or wrestling require an additional fee to clean up the mess once you're gone. Using certain types of equipment in a session, like heavy medical or full-enclosure rubber, will also have an upcharge. Like pretty much anything, you'll enjoy a better overall experience if you confirm costs up front.

HOW DO YOU CONTACT A MISTRESS AND WHAT IS CONSIDERED FAUX PAS?

When you contact a dominatrix, always be respectful. Many dommes, like Mistress Simone, have contact forms. Others, like Mistress Larkin, prefer a direct message on Twitter or have an email address on their site. When you write them, don't blather on about your kinks and fantasies. Get to the point and provide them with a way to contact you and availability; if this is your first visit, make that known. Don't beg to be her slave. Mistress Larkin prefers that you give her a small tribute when discussing a session. In her opinion, this weeds out the time-wasters.

WHAT A DOMINATRIX EXPECTS PRIOR TO A SESSION

Dommes expect you to give them references. This would be someone the mistress has already had a session with who can vet you. Each dominatrix has her own screening process, and you must comply with it, no exceptions. If you don't have someone to vouch for you, you'll be required to pony up some personal information to prove you're a real person and for safety.

Some dommes will run a background check. You'll be asked to provide your legal name, scan your ID and provide social media profiles. The more information you provide your domme, the better. Mistress Larkin requires an online interaction in the form of a paid five- or tenminute Skype session for all new clients. This helps her to ascertain if she is a good fit for your needs and gauge your demeanor.

Depending on the professional, you may be required to place a deposit on your session. Deposits range anywhere from 25% to 50% of the session price, but amounts vary. A larger deposit may be required if the domme is required to travel or if it's your first time with her. And yes, this is necessary. "Domination sessions require heavy preparation and planning, and no-shows are all too common," says Mistress Larkin. "There is nothing worse than the letdown and wasted time of a no-show. Our time is precious. Respect that, pay your deposit without complaint, and take comfort in the fact that you're engaging a professional. Real, established dominatrices don't rip off deposits. Reputation is the backbone of our business."

THINGS TO TELL YOUR DOMME IN ADVANCE

The most important thing is to reveal your limits. Maybe you don't like bleeding, being degraded about certain things or don't want marks on your body after the session. If you have any major health issues or recent surgeries, it's essential you let your domme know.

HOW TO PREPARE

Your chosen mistress will more than likely want you to reach out to her or the dungeon to confirm your session and make sure you won't flake. This is generally the time when you'll get the dungeon or space address.

If you do need to cancel, tell her as soon as possible. If you forego that courtesy, you might not get your deposit back and won't be able to reschedule. If you do need to cancel, it's a good idea to offer the mistress a tribute for her trouble.

Of course, make sure to take a shower and groom yourself. This should be a no-brainer. And if you're doing any kind of anal play, give yourself an enema.

IS SEX ON THE MENU?

According to Mistress Simone, traditionally dommes don't offer sex or engage in nudity. And don't get it twisted: "A woman simply being on top or being sexually aggressive is not domination." Although escorts might provide fetish services, don't expect a mistress to behave like an escort. Dommes are specialized fetish and BDSM practitioners. There's sexual energy, but not actual sex. If you're looking for "full-service," hire an escort, not a domme. According to Mistress Larkin, "If she says clearly that she doesn't offer full-service or doesn't offer bare-body face-sitting or whatever, listen to her. Don't ask for prices on specific sex acts." Not having sex with your clients is the difference between a pro domme and a rank amateur.

EXPECTED ETIQUETTE ONCE YOU ARRIVE

Showing up on time and paying fees in full is paramount. Don't show up early, since the Mistress might be in a session before yours. If you're planning to show up early, ask first. Be polite and do as you're told. This is the time to let the mistress know about your medical issues and physical limitations, if you haven't already.

The rest varies on the mistress's style. Some require a client to keep their eyes lowered to the ground, but Mistress Simone likes eye contact and "finds it a very powerful way to connect." No mistress will put up with things on her no list, like inappropriate touching or disrespectful language or behavior. Mistress Simone will "personally call a scene if the person is topping from the bottom too much. I'm not there to be bossed around." If you're in doubt what her rules are, Mistress Larkin suggests you "ask your domme to clarify what she wants and what is or isn't permitted."

There are certain things that are prohibited and will get you tossed out of a domme's lair. Mistress Larkin suggests these pointers: "Never ask her about her personal life or real name. If she wants to share her life with you, she will. You must never be rude, condescending or verbally abusive. Never try to negotiate a lower fee with her—ever. That is the height of disrespect. Never initiate physical contact with the domme. If she wants you to touch her, she'll tell you how to do it and when. Adhere to her stated boundaries like your life depends on it."

Mistress Simone despises "net speak, not speaking in complete sentences, not answering all of the questions asked, asking the same questions over and over, not following simple instructions, using terms like baby, honey and other inappropriately familiar phrases instead of my title: Mistress."

WHAT WILL THE SESSION BE LIKE

Every dominatrix operates a little differently, so of course, this is a generalized description. But if you're lucky and the place is empty, you might get a tour. Most dungeons are equipped with the tools of the trade: whips, paddles, etc. The domme should review your interests and limits again. Make sure to turn your phone off. You'll then be asked to undress. Most clients are fully naked, but some are clothed or keep their underwear on.

MISTRESS SIMONE

If you're new to this, she'll start slow, ask questions, read your body language and move lightly and slowly if she's administering pain to see how you take it. Your domme might tell you what she's doing as she's doing it. Don't ask her what she's going to do to you—that is a red flag for many dommes. But if you aren't enjoying something, tell her. Don't be afraid to speak up.

Mistresses have their own rules regarding what they will and won't do in a session, and this varies from domme to domme. Mistress Simone won't do scenes she's not into, because she "prefers to be authentic." Sometimes clients will propose a scene idea, and she'll turn it down. Just because you are paying doesn't mean you should get what you want—not in a dungeon.

Mistress Larkin won't allow people under the influence of alcohol or drugs into her space. She won't do "activities outside of her training." This would include Shibari, a complicated rope bondage that she's never been properly trained in and she does not yet feel confident to perform on a client who's relying on her for safety and comfort (or controlled discomfort). Instead, she opts to use cuffs, restraints or binding materials like bondage tape to achieve similar effects. Safety is always her top priority. And Mistress Larkin does not engage in scat or farting activities.

Once the session is over, your domme will simply stop. You might be permitted to relax or take a shower. If you have wounds, a first aid kit will come out. If you're dizzy, she'll have you lie down. First-timers might feel emotional and perhaps you'll even be allowed to sob in your domme's lap. You definitely want to take extra care of yourself once the session is over. Go home and get some rest, eat, and stay hydrated.

BRING A GIFT OR A TIP

Everyone loves something extra. Tipping isn't required and is totally up to you. If your domme is working out of someone else's dungeon or space, she has to give them part of her session fee. I would say not to offer them lower than $20, and higher is better if you want to build a relationship and return for a future session. If a dominatrix goes above and beyond, your tip is a great way to show your appreciation and help you to become one of her favorites.

A SAFE, JUDGMENT-FREE ZONE

Ultimately that is your takeaway, living out your fantasies in a safe, judgment-free zone. And it's possible you'll discover something about yourself you never knew. Self-discovery is one of the main reasons "everyone who is kinky should have a professional domme session at least a few times in their life," according to Mistress Larkin.

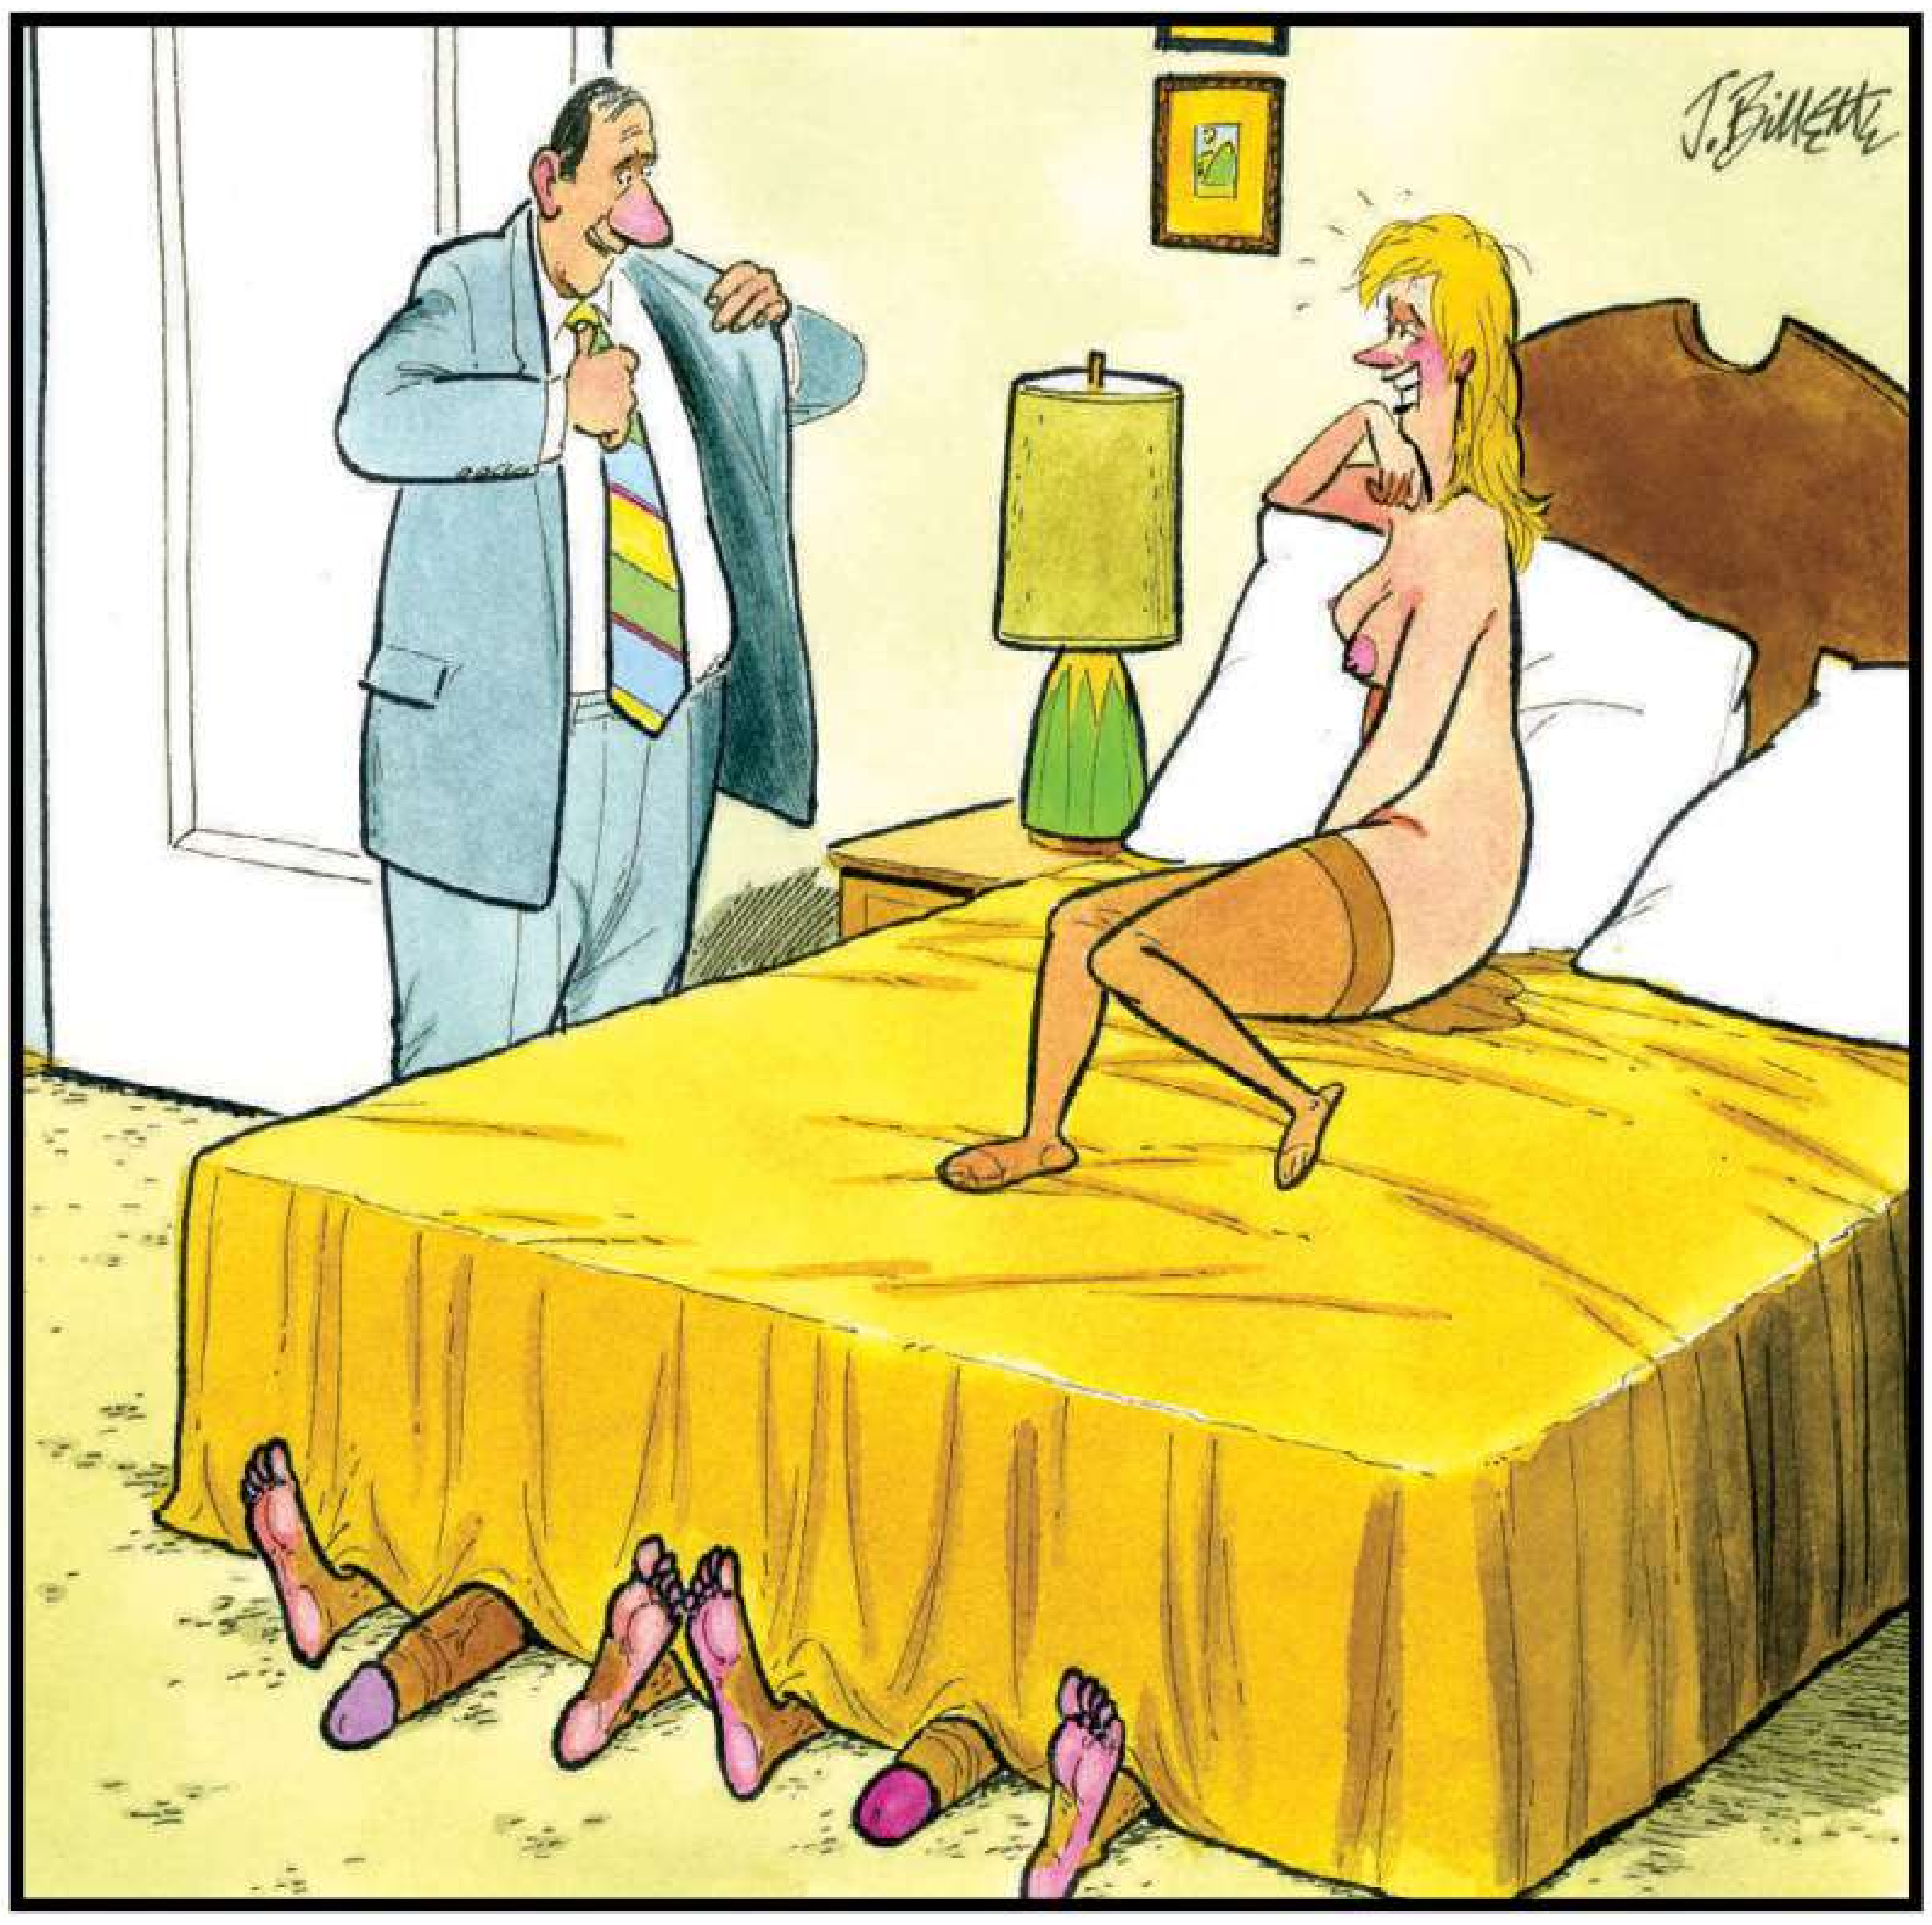
REMOVE THE WORDS WEIRD AND NORMAL FROM YOUR VOCABULARY. IT'S VERY LIMITING, AND YOU SHOULD NEVER FEEL BAD ABOUT YOUR SEXUALITY OR PUT YOURSELF DOWN.

A common kink involves men who want to discover their feminine side. Mistress Larkin has had many sessions with clients who would "never wear lingerie on their own." Something about "being forced by a bossy woman absolves them of any real guilt." According to her, it comes down to "sometimes people don't know what they want—or won't admit it to themselves—until another person suggests it."

Mistress Simone recently had a longtime submissive with an interesting revelation. "He told me he has developed a smoking fetish since he started seeing me. He never thought it was sexy before, and now he does. Often I enable people to realize what their true limits are, while helping them push through their fears and making them better and more confident once they're back in their vanilla worlds."

One last helpful hint: Remove the words weird and normal from your vocabulary. It's very limiting, and you should never feel bad about your sexuality or put yourself down. You should view yourself as courageous to explore your secret desires.

A really great pro domme will allow you to find a new side to yourself and never judge. She might even applaud you.



"Well, look at you all naked and waiting for me!"

I actually freak the fuck out if I don't have sex every day. I'm a bit of a wild child, always have been. Don't tell me not to do something, because I will do it. I want a lover who gives in to me when I'm trying to be cute and who likes to eat, because I'm a big foodie. Love anything Asian or tapas.

"Slow touches, caresses and teasing are total turn-ons, and I really can't decide if I like men or women better—let's just say I like to have my cake and eat it too. Best sex story? Well, one night I stopped a fire truck, made them let me in and drive around town while I sat on their laps. Then we all went back to the station house and fucked! Second best sex story? I had a blowbang with eight guys! It was such a fucking good time. I loved being in control."

I like a guy who's patient with me. I'm not necessarily high-maintenance, but I do get crazy. When I was younger, living in Oklahoma, I used to steal beer with my friends, and we'd drink them in random hotel rooms. My grandma would show up and catch us, and she'd always call the cops, begging them to arrest me. She was all about tough love!

"I guess I haven't learned my lesson yet, because I still party. Sometimes I'll be out with my girlfriends, and we'll end up in a buck-naked orgy. I'm a pretty kinky person with guys too—I like to be slapped a little and spanked, but I can be dominant too. Once I had a boyfriend who loved to be pissed on—he'd even swallow my pee. It was fun to degrade him because he was such a little shit in real life."

Whenever I perform, I become this loud, confident character, but in real life I'm shy, soft-spoken and embarrass easily. Once, in an airport, they searched my bag because I had a dildo in there. When they pulled it out in front of everyone, I just about died! Before I entered the industry, I didn't have a lot of sex-sex. I had anal, went down on girls and gave blowjobs and stuff, but I didn't fuck much because my pussy was too tight. Seriously! But now that I've been working for a few years, it's just right.

"I really have a thing for asses. It's such a strong thing, it could even be called a fetish. I'm always showing mine off on social media, and I like when other girls' butts are big and juicy too. Mel was in a bar when he saw a guy holding a gigantic cigarette lighter. He went up to him and asked, "Where did you get such a big lighter?"

The patron replied, "See that fella playing the piano? He's a genie, and he'll grant you one wish."

Mel ambled over to the piano player and requested, "I want a million bucks!"

All of a sudden the bar was filled to overflowing with a million ducks. Confused and disappointed, Mel staggered back to the dude with the huge lighter and muttered, "That genie is a little hard of hearing, isn't he?"

"No kidding!" the other barfly bellowed. "Ya think I wanted a 14-inch Bic?!"

A young female golfer's tee shot sliced badly and hit a man about to take his own shot from an adjoining hole. He put his hands together between his legs, fell on the ground and rolled around in agony.

Being a doctor, the woman rushed over to the guy and offered to relieve his pain. Reluctantly he agreed. The gal took his hands away from his crotch, unzipped his pants and stuffed her right hand inside. She massaged him tenderly for a few minutes, then asked, "How does that feel?"

The man looked up and replied, "It feels great, but I still think my thumb is broken."

Iris dashed into a drugstore and told the pharmacist that she wanted some arsenic.

"What for?" he asked.

"I want to kill my husband," Iris replied.

"Sorry, I can't do that," the pharmacist informed her.

Iris quickly reached into her handbag and pulled out a photo of her husband in bed with the pharmacist's wife. She handed it to the pharmacist.

"You didn't tell me you had a prescription," he said.

HUSTLER Wisdom: If you talk to God, they say you're religious. If God talks to you, they call you insane.

During a checkup, Cliff bragged to his doctor and a nurse that despite being 80 years old, he could still have sex three times a night. After the doctor left, the nurse said, "I hope I'm not being too forward, but I'd love to have sex with you, sir. Let's go back to my place."

The geezer liked that idea. Upon arriving at her home, the nurse led Cliff to her bed, and they had an hour of hot, passionate sex. Afterward Cliff said, "If you think that was good, let me sleep for an hour, and we can have even better sex. But while I'm sleeping, hold my balls in your left hand and my cock in your right hand."

The nurse was perplexed, but she murmured, "Okay."

Cliff dozed for an hour and woke up. He and the nurse then had better sex than before. "That was great!" Cliff roared. "But if you let me sleep for an hour, we can have even better sex than that. All you have to do is—"

"I know, sir," the nurse interjected. "You want me to hold your cock and balls again."

As Cliff promised, the next round of sex was mind-blowing. Once it was over, the exhausted nurse asked, "Does holding your cock and balls stimulate you that much?"

Cliff replied, "No, not at all. But the last time I had sex with a nurse, she stole my wallet while I was sleeping."

PROFESSOR RICHARD WOLFF

OF THE PEOPLE, BY THE PEOPLE, FOR THE PEOPLE: SOCIALISM EXPLAINED

When the 2008 financial meltdown reignited interest in alternatives to capitalism, Professor Richard Wolff was thrust into the limelight. The Marxian economist and scholar appeared on national TV and radio programs hosted by Bill Moyers, Charlie Rose, Bill Maher and Amy Goodman. He spoke to standing-room-only audiences at universities, union halls and churches. The academic also established the nationally syndicated radio program Economic Update (currently aired on 120-plus stations), authored numerous books and emerged as a leading American socialist.

Wolff was born in Youngstown, Ohio, in 1942 to parents who were refugees from Nazism. He received his B.A. from Harvard, a master's in economics from Stanford University and a Ph.D. in economics from Yale. The professor has taught at Yale, The City College of the City University of New York and the Sorbonne in Paris. He's currently professor emeritus at UMass, Amherst, and visiting professor at The New School University in Manhattan, where Wolff lives with his wife, hypnotherapist Dr. Harriet Fraad.

The economist's professional blossoming late in life disproves F. Scott Fitzgerald's notion there are "no second acts in American lives." Ironically, owing to Wall Street's crisis, the anticapitalist critic finally found his audience. The bemused professor marvels, "I've got to pinch myself; I'm having the time of my life." In this candid Q&A, Richard Wolff discusses socialism, income inequality, democracy, worker cooperatives, the Presidential race, class struggle, Marxism—and an economy of, by and for the working class.

INTERVIEW BY ED RAMPELL

PHOTOGRAPHY BY MARIUS BUGGE

HUSTLER: You've appeared on Fox Business Network's "Capitalism vs. Socialism Town Hall Event" and debated right-wingers like [ex-Presidential candidate] Herman Cain, Fox hosts Lou Dobbs and Stuart Varney. Why go on a pro-business outlet to debate conservatives?

RICHARD WOLFF: I readily agreed to appear on Fox. The answer why is very simple: It has been mainly impossible to discuss the fundamental issue of capitalism versus socialism, for the most part, over the last 75 years in the U.S. The Cold War meant this conversation became taboo. Any association with or conversation about socialism that wasn't merely dismissive or denunciatory was ruled out of order. That's a terrible loss. It's not healthy to avoid discussing how your systems are working or whether you can do better than what exists. That's how progress is made in every aspect of human life. It should be part of a discussion of economics. Making it impossible set us back for 75 years, allowed capitalism to develop here without limits and in extreme ways. So for me it's very important to put that topic back on the agenda of Americans, to assess the strengths and weaknesses of both capitalism and socialism, so we can have an intelligent conversation and see what's the best way forward in an economic situation most Americans already agree leaves a lot to be desired.

Since Fox is one of the major TV news networks and attracts a conservative, pro-business audience, this population has especially suffered from the taboo against ideas I present. So it's important to bring those ideas to just those folks.

HUSTLER Magazine has its particular audience. It's now recognizing a discussion about socialism is what ought to have happened. I commend HUSTLER for opening its pages to have this kind of conversation. It would be irresponsible of me to not avail myself of an opportunity to present these ideas to be debated by every corner of American society. It's a welcome invitation to do this interview, and I appreciate it. There are ironies associated with it: One of the things capitalism has done is develop a use of human sexuality to sell goods and services that's not admirable. Whether it's in the framework of pornography or advertising, the use of sexual problems, difficulties, needs to sell is not good for people or sexuality. It's something capitalism delivered to us, as it did advertising, which uses all kinds of human feelings and anxieties—not to solve or improve them, but rather to sell something by exploiting them. This is something raised in my head by an interview with HUSTLER, even though of course HUSTLER is not responsible for all this stuff, any more than countless other media are that depend on the advertising industry, which in turn depends on capitalism, which sees profit in selling things no matter what they do to the people who consume them.

America has a low level of public discourse. Words are often thrown around without any connection to their meanings and origins. What's the source of the terms left-wing and right-wing?

Ironically enough, it has to do with the seating patterns in the parliament established as part of the French Revolution. One of the Revolution's key parts was the election of delegates to their national assembly, and they were seated in a way that reflected their views. Those who favored the Revolution, who wanted it to go forward, were seated on the left side of the hall. Those who were more moderate or didn't want the Revolution at all were seated in the right wing of the auditorium. As shorthand, journalists and others began referring to one group as "left-wingers" and the other as "right-wingers."

France had kings who ran the country with an iron hand. The kings were incredibly wealthy. The Versailles Palace, outside of Paris—you'll marvel at the remarkable gardens, castles. The wealthy were unspeakably wealthy and surrounded by the vast majority, who were very, very poor. That's what the Revolution was really about, ending the absurdly unequal distribution of income and wealth. The Revolution was to change all that. Left-wingers were in favor of it, and the right-wing preferred leaving things as they'd been.

Income inequality in the USA today is arguably as bad, if not worse, than it was in France before the Revolution in 1789. Tell us about our own economic disparity.

You've put your finger on it in the way you posed the question. A revolution was the final solution to the kinds of inequality in France for 1,000 years before, under feudalism, where a small number of people owned and operated the agrarian plantations that made up the economy, called "lords" or "landlords." The vast majority who worked the land were called "serfs." The inequality between them eventually got so bad and odious to the majority, they made a revolution.

In the U.S. we have, particularly since the 1970s, experienced a growing inequality of wealth. For example, Jeff Bezos, head of Amazon, has a reputed wealth of $150 billion, relative to an average American family earning $40,000 to $50,000 a year—a gap as stark as that between King Louis XVI at the time of the French Revolution and the average poor citizen of France. I'm not surprised people are becoming more and more critical of capitalism for exactly the same reasons of extreme inequality that motivated the French back in the 18th century to make a revolution that overthrew feudalism.

The top 1% of Americans get 20% of the income. The other 99% of us fight over four-fifths of the income, because the top 1% skims off 20%. In the 1970s the top 1% only got 10% of the income of the whole country. Inequality has doubled in this country in terms of income between the 1970s and now. The top 10% earn nearly half the income of the U.S., leaving the other 90% to fight over the remaining half. These are extreme inequalities.

In another measure of inequality—not about income, which is the money flowing into your hand each week, each month—but wealth, how much property you have—homes, cars, stocks, bonds—here inequality is much worse. The top 10% of American families own over $50 trillion in wealth. The next 40% own $15 trillion, and here comes the number you should really focus on: The bottom 50% of American people have no wealth at all. If you add up what they own and subtract what they owe other people, the end result is the owing cancels out what they have. They have no net wealth whatsoever. That is an extraordinarily divided country. An economic system that works like that obviously invites enormous criticism.

In the U.S. the average ratio of the CEO of a large corporation to the wages paid to an average worker is 250 and 300 to one. The superrich have wild amounts of money beyond anything they could ever need, while others don't have the bare minimum of what they need. The craziness, the inappropriateness, the injustice of this boggles the mind. It damages the lives of millions in order to give the 1% way more wealth than they know what to do with. That's why we got rid of monarchies.

Socialism* is one of the most misunderstood and even feared words in America today. What is it? Can you clearly define socialism?
Socialism is an alternative system to capitalism. Socialists have been the people, for the past two or three centuries, who feel capitalism has a sufficient number of failures and flaws that we could and should do better. Socialists offer what they think would make for a better economic system.

> THE TOP 10% OF AMERICAN FAMILIES OWN OVER $50 TRILLION IN WEALTH. THE NEXT 40% OWN $15 TRILLION. THE BOTTOM 50% OF AMERICAN PEOPLE HAVE NO WEALTH AT ALL.

There's no simple answer. The word socialism has not stayed the same—neither has capitalism. The systems change, and so do meanings of words for those systems. For the 19th and most of the 20th century socialism meant roughly that you should not leave the enterprises of a society in the hands of a small minority. The owners of businesses, of large shares of capital in companies, should not be owned by a small number of people, because if a small number of people own the means of production, they'll make [the means of production] serve them. They'll take the lion's share of what can be produced.

Socialism said we should not leave the production apparatus in the hands of a few individuals—we should make it democratically socialized. Everybody should own the means of production so they're used to benefit everyone. It's like a public park. You have access to something owned by everybody collectively and thereby made available to everybody. Socialists want the economy as a whole to run like that. They believed, in the 19th and 20th centuries, if the government took over industry the way it took over public lands, we'd have much less inequality, because the fruits of the production system, the goods and services we all depend on, would be distributed much more equally—the way access to a public park is—than if it was a private park that charged high fees for access.

The second part of what socialism meant in the 19th and 20th centuries had to do with how you distributed goods and services after they were produced, who gets how much. Socialists argued a market is not the right way to do it. The socialists' argument was moral. They said if there was a scarcity, it should be distributed to people according to criteria other than how much money you have, because those without money are excluded from whatever is scarce. Socialists always argued that's unjust and unfair. They said we should work out a system of distributing goods and services more according to the needs people have that we can democratically decide, rather than how much money you have. We should not be governed by a market. The idea, in the 19th and 20th centuries, was if we give the government the role of owning and operating enterprises and of distributing goods and services, we can have a less unequal, less unstable, less unjust system and do better than capitalism.

And now the complexity: We discovered in the 20th century, in the experiences of the Soviet Union and China, that the early socialist argument had some problems. The weakness of socialism proved to be that if you give the economic power to the government, you run the risk that the government will use that economic power to take much too much political and cultural power and deprive people of a level of personal and political freedom. So a new kind of socialism has emerged, which says we should not take away ownership and operation of enterprises from private individuals and give it to the government. Instead, we should switch the power, the ownership and operation of every enterprise to all of the people working in it democratically. One person, one vote. And we decide democratically what the enterprise produces, how it goes about producing it, where production takes place—and here comes the big one: We together democratically decide what to do with the profits that all of our efforts together have produced.

In short, socialism today is mainly defined around the notion of democratizing the enterprise, bringing democracy into each factory, store, office. If we love democracy half as much as we Americans claim, we should have brought it into our workplaces long ago. Why do we limit it? Socialism is the advocacy of socializing, democratizing the enterprise. And here's why: If the workers together democratically decided things about the enterprise, would they give a handful of people enormous wealth, while the rest of us are worried if we can give our kids college educations? I don't think so.

> “IF WE LOVE DEMOCRACY HALF AS MUCH AS WE AMERICANS CLAIM, WE SHOULD HAVE BROUGHT IT INTO OUR WORKPLACES LONG AGO. WHY DO WE LIMIT IT?”

Would the workers decide to move the factory out of town, to China? I don't think so. The history of the U.S. over the last 30 years, which has been an exodus of business, would never have happened. If there's pollution spewed around a factory, if workers who have to breathe the air, whose families have to drink the water, if they made the decisions, they wouldn't choose that technology the way a small group of capitalists, who may live 1,000 miles away, would more readily do.

Socialism has become the advocacy of a transformation of the workplace and work life. It would mean every American would have two job descriptions: He/she would still do the particular thing they were trained for, but they'd also, as part of their job, be a member of a democratic community at the workplace that together decides what to produce, how to produce, where to produce and what to do with the profits.

Tell us about your latest book, Understanding Marxism?
It's a short book designed to make Marxism interesting and accessible to anyone. With the growth of socialism has come an interest in its most developed tradition. You can be a socialist without being a Marxist, a particular way of understanding and pursuing socialism. People interested in socialism inevitably find their way to Marxism.

Interest in socialism and its popularity has grown. What are examples of Americans' changing attitudes to socialism?
According to a May 20, 2019, Gallup poll, 43% of Americans say socialism would be a good thing for the U.S. That's an amazing statistic. It's not an exaggeration to say that even after 75 years of making socialism a really bad word, which politicians used to destroy one another by accusing him/her of being socialist—despite 75 years of bad-mouthing socialism, 43% of Americans say socialism would be good. That's a sign of enormous change, and most of that has happened since the great crash of 2008 and 2009.

The younger people are, the bigger the numbers. People under 35 years of age, it's closer to 60%, a clear majority. Each year it gets better for people who like socialism and not so good for people who like capitalism. People who were in high school and college around 2008 were led to believe, like most generations of the last 40 years, that if they went to school, acquired skills, worked hard, they'd have the American Dream: get married, have children, own their own home, have cars, get a decent vacation and get their kids college educations.

This is no longer possible. The majority of Americans aren't getting married anymore. A bigger majority aren't having children. The reality is, the level of debt people have to go into has told that generation something fundamental: You were led to believe the American Dream was in your reach. It isn't anymore. Nobody prepared these young people for being betrayed, and they're not happy about an economic system that plunges them into a bad present and worse future with no preparation at all.

Here's an example: After 32-year-old ex-Marine Lee Carter was honorably discharged, he went to work in Virginia, had an accident on the job, applied for workers' compensation and discovered the [workers' comp] administration was terrible. This experience opened his eyes—how many others are abusively treated by the government or private employer? He stopped believing capitalism was the best this country could do for its people. He wants a transition to socialism. Lee decided to run for Virginia's House of Delegates in 2017 as a socialist within the Democratic Party and won, defeating the Republican House majority whip, a longtime incumbent. Democrats tried to get rid of him in the June 2019 primary, but he handily won.

On June 25 [31-year-old Democratic Socialists of America member] Tiffany Cabán was elected Queens district attorney.

Has this upsurge of interest in socialism been reflected in memberships of socialist groups and parties?
I believe virtually every one of them has increased. The most famous is the Democratic Socialists of America [DSA]. They've fielded candidates like Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez and others [including Carter, Cabán, Congresswoman Rashida Tlaib]. DSA attracted thousands of new members, the most visible sign of the increase of socialism. But an even bigger one is the votes Senator Bernie Sanders got in 2016's Presidential election. Millions and millions of Americans voted for Bernie. He was identified as a socialist. He did not run away from it. He stayed true to his socialist beliefs, and millions liked him. He did way better than anyone foresaw, and now he's running again, and he's one of the top candidates in the polling for the Democratic Party's Presidential nomination. The evidence is overwhelming that the problems of capitalism are severe enough that despite the taboo, Americans are facing up to it, seeing it and deciding the country can do better and that some kind of socialism is at least one major direction that should be investigated.

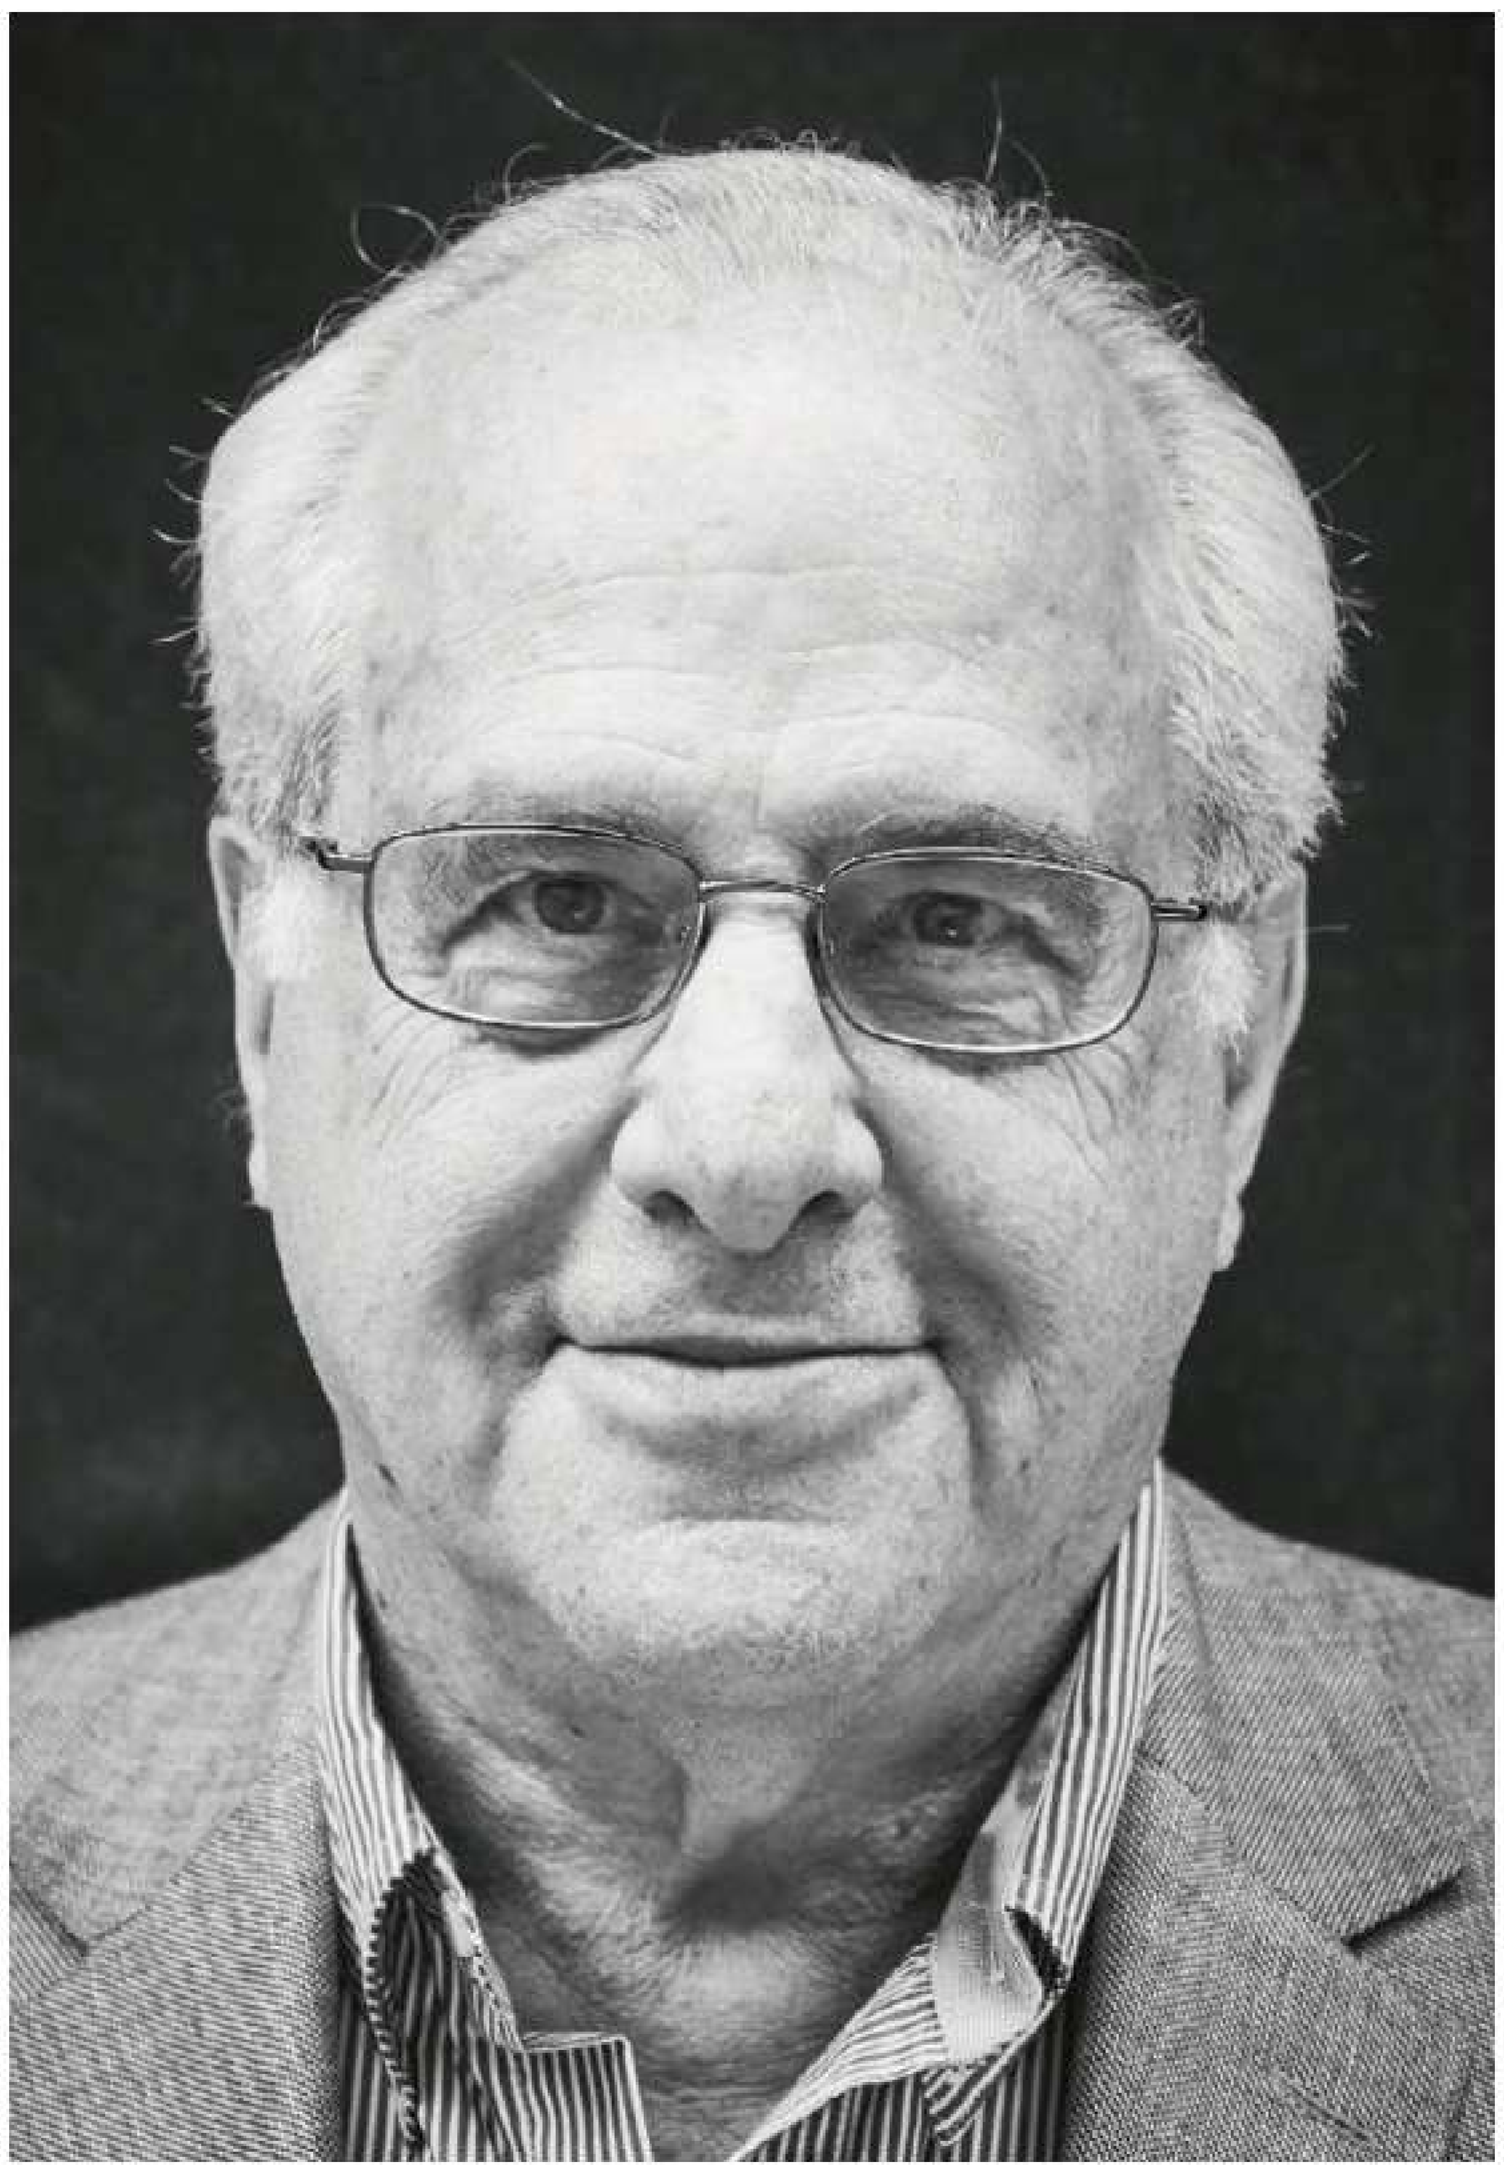
You advocate workers' cooperatives. What are they?

A worker co-op makes the workplace into a democratic community. Every worker has equal power, one vote, to make decisions, majority rule. What to produce, how to produce and what to do with profits. The people are in charge, not a small group of employers who dictate to the majority what we do on the job, [where] everything we poured our muscle and brains into belongs to the employer. That's the opposite of democracy. We don't need kings in the workplace. Worker co-ops are the democratization of the economy, to make a society that works for the majority of the people.

Worker co-ops have existed throughout history. The most famous example is the Mondragon Cooperative Corporation in Spain. In the Bay Area's Arizmendi Bakeries everybody's part of the decision-making group. The collective self-employment of workers gives them a sense of being in charge of their lives. The trend is growing here; there's even a U.S. Federation of Worker Cooperatives. Worker co-ops are an alternative way to organize the economy.



Discuss the current Presidential race and candidates.

To this point, the only candidate comfortable with the label "socialist," who's willing to say socialism ought to be debated, discussed, and what he calls "democratic socialism" would be a good next step for the U.S., is Bernie Sanders. The things he said back in 2016, which he identified with socialism, were rejected by most Democrats then for being too far out. Ironically, nowadays many candidates besides Bernie advocate the very things Bernie talked about in 2016. They're still afraid of the label "socialist," but if you look closely at what Elizabeth Warren and some of the other contenders are saying—about single-payer healthcare, forgiving student debt—Kamala Harris, Peter Buttigieg and several others are onboard—they were taboo, "socialist," but are now part of the everyday thinking of Democrats who are still afraid of the label, but increasingly embracing the substantive proposals that go with it.

Do you endorse any candidate?

No, I don't want to get into that. My fear is what the Democrats and Republicans became over the last century were advocates for capitalism. They're overwhelmingly supported by donations from wealthy people—wealthy because they own or run big corporations. These are political parties who need to spend vast amounts of money, which they get from a very small part of our society. Therefore, they're compromised, captured by their donors. Either the Democratic Party has to walk away from that dependency on the corporate elite—a long shot—or we need more political parties, like most countries have, so Americans have real choices. Between Republicans and Democrats, you're choosing between two parties who are cheerleaders for capitalism. For Americans to have real political choice, you need parties advocating for socialism. We don't have that option now and won't until either the Democratic Party adopts a socialist program or it splits and part of it, perhaps with other people, develops a political party offering a real choice.

In 1920 Eugene Debs ran for President from a prison cell and received 900,000 votes. He was arrested for advocating socialism and opposing World War I. In 1924 Wisconsin Senator Robert La Follette ran for President on the Progressive Party ticket, getting 5 million votes [16.6% of the vote].

Can socialism come to America through the ballot box, or will it require an armed overthrow of the capitalist class and state?

That question is not appropriately directed to me. I want it to be peaceful. We don't threaten civil war. Those threats come from the right-wing, white supremacists, etc. The people who have the power and means to do that are those who run capitalism—they're the ones you have to ask. As support for socialism grows, like Carter, Cabán and AOC winning elections, what's the ruling class, big corporations, going to do? That's the question. Will they accept that people are changing their minds and want to go in another direction, or will they resort to violence to stop this process? From the Palmer Raids to the McCarthy period, there's a long history of those running America, frightened by the masses, using violence and the state's repressive apparatus. It's not socialists who do that—they're usually victims of it. If they resort to armed activity, they can claim self-defense, but the people running America cannot. H

CREAMPIED MY SECRETARY

HUSTLER VIDEO. DIRECTOR: B. SKOW. STARRING: VERONICA VALENTINE, EMMA STARLETTO, HONEY BLOSSOM, PETRA BLAIR, CHARLES DERA, LUCAS FROST, JOHNNY GOODLUCK & QUINTON JAMES.

While the #MeToo movement has largely closed the door on employer/employee trysts in the past couple of years, Creampied My Secretary seems intent on reopening those channels, one cock-dilated, jizz-infused twat at a time. Comely brunet office gal Veronica Valentine comes to her boss with a non-workplace dilemma: She can't stop blowing her boyfriend, and she wants him to come inside her, but she says her pussy is too tight. Which seems like a self-resolving problem, but no matter. In a more strict corporate environment, this sort of divulgence would lead to a visit to HR, but Valentine's boss takes her under his wang with a mentor's patience. Normally, having a workplace superior hovering over your shoulder is an uncomfortable experience, but Valentine doesn't seem to mind as her employer dicks her down doggy-style. He thrusts into her like a matador stabbing a bull and eventually breaks in her snug snatch like a baseball glove, dispensing a dollop of dick oil into her crotch pocket. The next girl Friday to opt for a direct deposit into her pink purse is Emma Starletto, a ditzy-demeanored blonde who consoles her boss after an unsuccessful presentation. Starletto's pep talk leads to a bone-up session, as she washes away her supervisor's insecurities with healing licks. For her efforts, Starletto's boss leaves a little something extra in her envelope, filling it up with nut butter. Creampied My Secretary is a daily grind you'll look forward to. JULES JORDAN VIDEO. DIRECTOR: JULES JORDAN. STARRING: SAVANNAH BOND, AUTUMN FALLS, AVA ADDAMS, ARYANA ADIN, MANUEL FERRARA & MARKUS DUPREE.

Brassieres get stretched to the limit in Bra Busters 9. Unfortunately, on occasion, so does the viewer's patience. Things start off promisingly, with Savannah Bond, a pretty enough blonde with pendulous jugs. Bond might have considered a career in the Peace Corps; her jaw-dropping knockers could no doubt provide shade and sustenance to an entire Third World village. As it is, Bond occupies herself with taking a spirited dicking from her scenemate, who routs her plump-lipped kisser with his beef bone like a plumber tackling a particularly stubborn drain clog. Eventually he mounts Bond from behind, gripping her by the neck in a move that brings to mind an MMA maneuver. It's satisfying, at least at first, but somewhere past the 20-minute mark the scene settles into fleshy monotony, an endurance test for performers and viewers alike. Luckily, glamour-pussed brunette Autumn Falls arrives next to inject some fresh blood and sumptuous melons into the proceedings. Falls' milk mounds are perfectly shaped, and her scene with Manuel Ferrara even boasts a hint of acrobatic ingenuity, as Ferrara shoves his big toe into Falls' yap while she squats atop his prick. The scene ends with Ferrara raining semen upon her face, the second facial in a row for this offering—which presents a thematic quandary: If big tits are the focus here, don't they deserve to shine in the jizz-glistening spotlight? The video closes with mocha-skinned cum-catcher Aryana Adin who, while appropriately mountain-mammed, is equally outsized everywhere else. The cups runneth over in Bra Busters 9, but it's a glass-half-empty experience for the audience. —P.D.R.

HARDX. DIRECTOR: MASON. STARRING: LENA PAUL, LISEY SWEET, MICK BLUE, MR. PETE, RAMON NOMAR, JOHN STRONG, BRAD NEWMAN, DONNY SINS & ISIAH MAXWELL.

Hello, sports fans—welcome to Gangbang Me 4! Boy, is there an exciting matchup in store! Lena Paul, a dirty blond, heavy-chested newcomer to the gangbang scene, is making her first trip to the cocktagon to see if she has what it takes to take multiple dickings and keep on licking. This is uncharted territory for Paul, but she seems cautiously confident in a pre-bout interview, declaring, "I'm shaky, but from good nerves." This kid has spunk, and we're betting that Paul will be displaying a lot more spunk before this whole thing is over. Paul is faced with some stiff competition today—five girder-groined gladiators want to put her to the test in the school of hard cocks. And the bell rings! Paul comes out strong, but—oh!—early in the bout, down goes Paul! But what's this? Paul turns the tables and secures an opponent in an anal death-grip! Holy moly, she's taken another couple of pricks into submission with her twat and mouth! This is a true show of control, like when Senator Larry Craig uses an airport men's room without sucking a cock or three. Point is, this is a battle of wills, folks. And now the battle has taken another twist, right into the tortuous depths of Paul's colon! Paul's opponents are going for a double-anal! Paul is starting to show signs of strain and fatigue when—ding!—the match is over, and Paul has gone the distance, a thick glazing of jizz the testament to her victory. Gangbang Me 4 is a winner. —P.D.R.

TATIANA SYMPA

This "outgoing" office clerk from La Jolla, California, makes no bones about her reasons for wanting to be a Beaver. "For the money, of course," Tatiana Sympa, 27, asserts, "and the feeling of being empowered in my skin." Clothed or unclothed, the 5-foot-8 dazzler digs the great outdoors. "My hobbies are swimming, hiking, walking my dog and beach volleyball," Tatiana tells us. "Being tall—my legs go on for miles—I'm really good at spiking the ball." When in couch-potato mode, she sticks with one boob-tube genre. "I'm a huge fan of Law & Order: Special Victims Unit, Chicago P.D. and any other crime shows that Dick Wolf created," Tatiana divulges. And she primarily sticks with one gender when it comes to physical intimacy: "I'm straight, but I've had a couple of threesomes with another girl. I mostly love having sex with my boyfriend, especially riding cowgirl, and wearing him out daily." Tatiana is truly fearless and uninhibited. "If I feel the urge, I will get it on with my guy no matter where we are," she fesses up. "We once had sex in a men's bathroom in a five-star hotel and almost got caught." No wonder Tatiana can say, "I'm happy most of the time." —Photos by Friend

“If I feel the urge, I will get it on with my guy no matter where we are.”

LILIAN STONE

"I feel like I was born to be in the adult industry," declares Lilian Stone, 26, a camgirl from Twentynine Palms, California. "I'm an outgoing wild woman, and I work hard every day to better myself. I love having new experiences, especially when I'm naked." Lilian, who previously worked in a bakery, has added skin modeling to her résumé, and she's tickled pink to be displaying her cookie and the rest of her 5-foot-6 bod in Larry Flynt's flagship publication. "Who wouldn't want to be a part of his amazing magazine?" Lilian asks. "I absolutely love reading HUSTLER. It's funny, creative and seductive." She's also into making jewelry and candles, glass cutting, reading, going to the gym, hiking on trails, the Dave Matthews Band and the TV series Blood. Lilian isn't a vampire, but she has some mystique. "I see myself as an alluring, seductive, bisexual succubus," she explains. "I love being hot and bothered before the sex and making sure there's lots of foreplay. I've been told I'm really good with my mouth, teasing and edging." Ms. Stone, who's eager to go the XXX route, wraps things up with a bang: "My favorite position is jockey, with reverse cowgirl a close second, and I like to play rough. I'm as comfortable with my hair being pulled as I am tying a girl up." —Photos by J.Ellis Cox

“I’ve always wanted to try double penetration, so that’s my biggest sexual fantasy. I’ve heard that the orgasms are amazing. I also want to be part of an all-girl orgy with lots of toys.”

“I have a fetish for a man being in charge, pleasing me till I can take no more and taking me until he has exhausted himself.”

RENAE

"I'm comfy with my body, and I've never minded showing it off," says Renae, 28, from St. Paul, Minnesota. "I used to be a stripper. Then I got into waitressing. Now that I'm going to be a mommy, I'm proud to show off how being pregnant has changed my body. My boobs and belly have been getting bigger by the minute." The 5-foot-5 Gopher Stater, who once streaked during a blizzard and has been caught screwing on a golf course, continues, "I'm sweet, charming and fun. My pastimes include making hemp jewelry, listening to Machine Gun Kelly, watching TV—I focus on Shameless, iZombie and Supernatural—and taking care of my pets. I'm a devoted animal lover and rescuer." When sexual satisfaction must come to her rescue, Renae loves "doggy-style, missionary with my legs on my partner's shoulders and standing up with my hair being pulled. I also like using my hands to pleasure myself while watching cosplay porn." That confession steers us to Renae's star-studded bucket list: "My fantasies are tour bus sex with Machine Gun Kelly and a threesome involving MGK and rapper Mod Sun."

—Photos by Kickback Productions

"I love getting laid doggy-style, but I have the most incredible orgasms when I'm watching cosplay porn and playing with myself."

HUSTLER CLASSIC
PHOTOGRAPHY BY HOLLY RANDALL

XXX

Sasha likes to pretend she's a con artist who's pushed her luck once too often. That's how she ended up in an interrogation room getting drilled by a couple of hard-nosed dicks. They pummel her with question after question—they act tough, try intimidation tactics, threaten to get a little rough, but Sasha doesn't scare easily. In fact, within the hour she's turned the tables on those pricks. Now they're alternately asking her not to stop and begging for her mercy. A couple of coppers ain't no match for a girl who is confident in her skills. They'll definitely let her go…when she's good and ready.

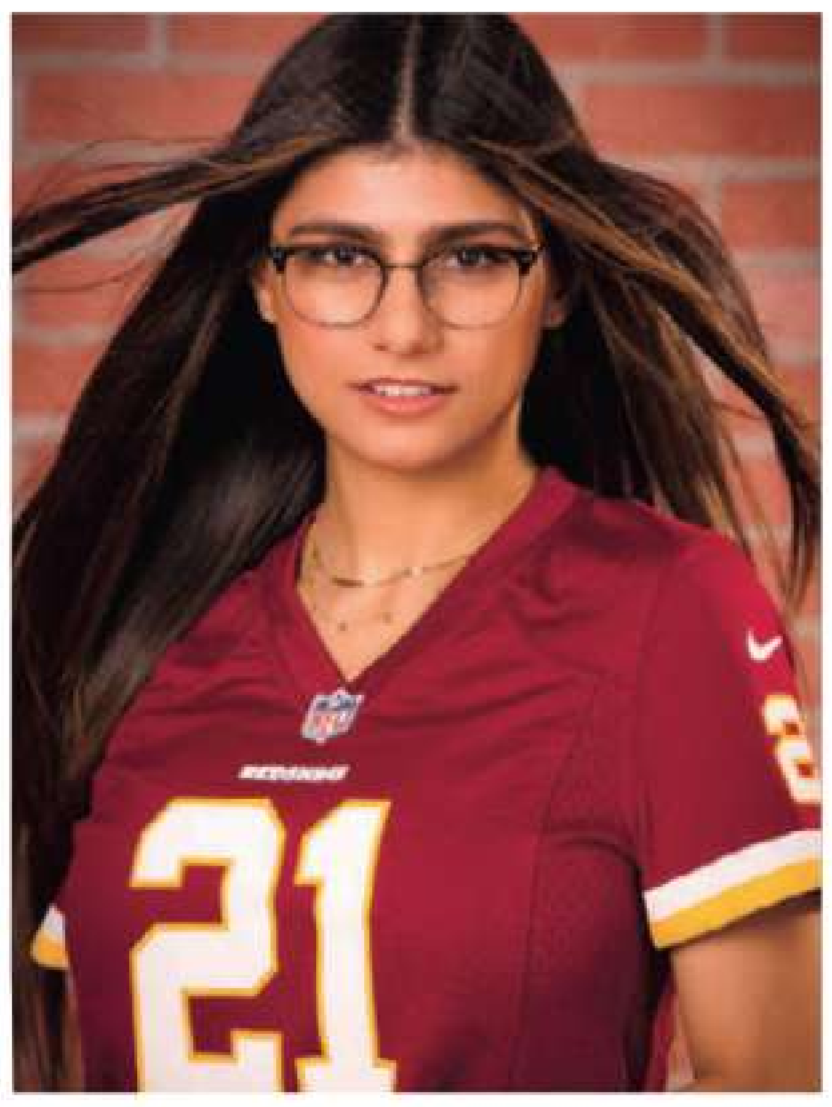
MARGRET CHO

Cho has always been brutally honest onstage about every aspect of her life, from her overbearing mother to her active libido. We catch up to the comedy trailblazer to discuss her new podcast and her plans to become known as the Old Nymphomaniac. Interview by Keith Valcourt. Photography by Sergio Garcia.

MIA KHALIFA

Of Mia Khalifa's many amazing attributes, the most impressive of all just might be her sharp tongue. The sports pundit and super fan aims her barbs at the American athletic landscape and recounts the slapshot to her tit that scored her a playoff puck! Interview by T.S. Farley. Photography by Victor Lightworship.



SHE FUCKED MY FRIEND

Bitch stole your boyfriend right from under your nose. It's not like she even wants him. She just wants what's yours. But that's all right. Payback's a bitch, and tonight you're bedding her beau. Illicit sex really is the fucking best. Photography courtesy HUSTLER Video.
